INTRODUCTION

In the event of the disappearance, detention or arrest of a foreign citizen abroad, the very first step to take is to alert the consular emergency services of your country as soon as possible.

IMPORTANT: consular phone numbers listed as “emergency lines” and/or “outside office hours” are to be used exclusively in the case of an emergency involving a citizen of that country. For all other questions, please visit the Embassy or Consulates’ websites for relevant contacts and procedures.

This European directory contains emergency consular contact details and relevant Government resources of the diplomatic missions of the European Union Member States and European Free Trade Area countries to the People’s Republic of China. It was compiled from open-source materials in October 2024.

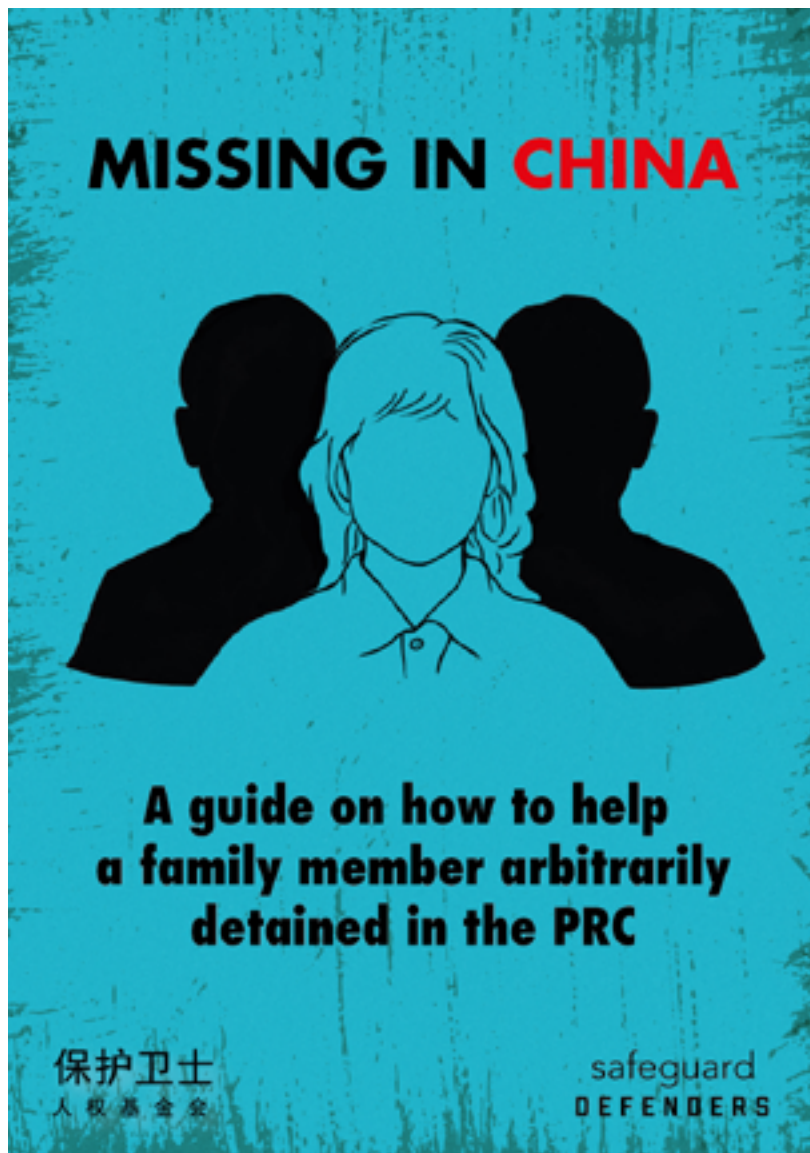

Before traveling to the People’s Republic of China, please check your Embassy or Foreign Ministry’s website for any updates.

Take note of all relevant contacts prior to departure and keep them with you at all times during your stay. Together with a detail of your travel plans, also share these contacts with your designated family member(s) or friend(s). The more information they have promptly available in case something happens, the better.

When you are detained or arrested, local authorities are required to inform your consular representation. Chinese authorities may not do this automatically: expressly request they do so.

Many foreign ministries have free of charge pre-travel registration forms. We warmly recommend submitting these prior to your departure, so authorities have the necessary information in case something goes wrong. These forms will also allow your government to alert you in case of any emergencies.

If you are a dual citizen, refrain from traveling to China on your Chinese passport as consulates will not be able to assist you in such a situation.

This Directory is complementary to our practical guide Missing in China: A handbook on how to help a family member arbitrarily detained in the PRC. Based on the direct experience of former victims and their relatives, Missing provides concrete tips and insights on what to expect and do upon the disappearance, detention or arrest of a family member in China.

While focused on what to do once a family member has been detained or arrested in China, this guide will also provide you with useful advice on steps to take prior to your departure to ensure your designated contacts back home can best assist if things go wrong.

We recommend anyone traveling to China to familiarize themselves and their designated contact(s) with this guide. Chinese authorities may search your belongings and electronic devices at all times during your stay in the country. Do not carry this guide with you.
